

Meet our first year residents.

Cali Bills, D.O.

Dr. Cali Bills is from Fort Morgan, CO. She attended college at University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, and Medical school at Des Moines University. She knew she wanted to become a doctor at the end of high school after visiting a medical school campus with her anatomy class. During the visit, she heard from the medical students how meaningful and impactful a career in medicine could be. Her professional interests are LGBTQ+ care, in-office procedures, women's health, and preventative medicine.

Dr. Bills chose the Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency program for the supportive environment with a well-rounded curriculum she experienced first-hand while completing her internship with the program as a medical student. Her hobbies include growing houseplants, pub trivia, and spending time with her partner and family. During residency, she hopes to learn how to best care for her patients and understand their needs, especially in areas of lower resources.

Meet our first year residents.

Holt Champion, D.O.

Dr. Holt Champion is from Central Illinois. He completed his undergrad at the University of Mississippi and attended medical school at Rocky Vista University College of Osteopathic Medicine. His experience as an EMT on a 911 ambulance in Fort Collins inspired him to become a doctor. His professional interests are integrating lifestyle medicine into patient care to help prevent and even reverse disease.

Dr. Holt chose the Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency program because it prepares residents to practice across high quality all-in-one care of family medicine. He is confident he will gain the strong knowledge base and hands-on experience needed to pursue any career path he chooses within family medicine. In his free time, he enjoys playing basketball, golf, pickleball, and roller hockey. He also enjoys taking walks with his family and on the occasional video games, watching football and hockey if the weather is not cooperating. During residency, he hopes to become a confident, competent physician who builds strong relationships with his patients. He wants to incorporate his patients' goals, beliefs, and priorities into individualized, comprehensive care that encompasses all aspects of health, including mental, physical, and spiritual well-being.

Samual Hatfield, M.D.

Dr. Samual Hatfield is from Spokane, WA. He received his undergrad at Eastern Washington University for and attended Medical School at University of Iowa Carver College of Medicine. He knew he wanted to become a doctor while working as a medical laboratory scientist in the Army Reserves after high school. His professional interests are primary care and Labor & Delivery.

Dr. Hatfield chose the Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency Program for its high quality all-in-one care curriculum, a thorough mix of outpatient, inpatient, and procedural competency that will prepare him for any practice environment. He sees the area as a good fit for him and his family as a long-term/permanent location. He is an avid hiker, mountaineer, and rock climber, and enjoys fishing, cycling, and ice climbing. During residency, he hopes to become a family physician who is comfortable practicing broad, procedurally focused primary care. He is particularly interested in pre-hospital and rural medicine. He also hopes to pursue his FAWM (Fellowship of the Academy of Wilderness Medicine) and continue building skills in obstetrics and other hands-on parts of Family Medicine.

Meet our first year residents.

David Lehrburger, D.O.

Dr. David Lehrburger is from Ashland, OR. He completed his undergrad from Oregon State University and attended Medical School at Campbell University School of Osteopathic Medicine. While in medical school, he volunteered as a Spanish interpreter. Inspired by his parents, he knew he wanted to become a doctor. His father was an emergency room physician, and his mother an ER nurse. His professional interests are working with vulnerable populations, and helping to keep patients healthy and out of the hospital. He has strong interests in obstetrics, wilderness medicine, addiction medicine, lifestyle medicine, and global health.

Dr. Lehrburger chose Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency Program for the exceptional training curriculum that emphasizes all-in-one care, while being in a strictly Family Medicine training community hospital setting, in proximity to his family, and have easy access to the outdoors. His hobbies are trail running, hiking, camping, backpacking, rock climbing, biking, gardening, sewing, and soccer. During residency, he wants to learn to become a confident family physician capable of providing high quality all-in-one care across all stages of life. He is especially excited to grow in obstetrics, continuity care, and caring for underserved populations

Meet our first year residents.

Katharine Lunde, M.D.

Dr. Katharine Lunde was born in the UK but moved to Colorado as a baby and spent most of her childhood on a horse farm east of Parker, CO. She completed her undergrad at Xavier University in Cincinnati, OH and attended medical school at the University Of Colorado School Of Medicine. She grew up on a farm, which sparked her lasting interest in the health sciences. Her professional interests include family planning, obstetric care, and supporting mothers through the postpartum period, with a particular passion for lactation.

Dr. Lunde chose Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency program was the perfect balance of great quality all-in-one family medicine training in a place where her family could thrive. She enjoys sharing a meal with her family and friends. She loves cooking for others, eating good food, and sharing conversation at the dinner table. She also enjoys being outside and active. Challenging activities are a plus, especially if it includes climbing, camping and backpacking. She loves a chill game or movie night too. During residency, she would like to develop her passions and interests within family medicine to become a better doctor for her patients.

Meet our first year residents.

Jonah Muller, M.D.

Dr. Jonah Muller is from Bemidji, MN. He completed his undergraduate at the University of Minnesota, and attended medical school at the University of North Dakota School of Medicine and Health Sciences. He knew he wanted to be a doctor from an early age, following his father's steps. His professional interests are all-in-one care family medicine and the underserved.

Dr. Muller chose the Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency Program after becoming familiar with the area while visiting family in town. He is an avid Minnesota sports fan and enjoys going to as many Gopher, Vikings, Twins, Timberwolves, and Wild games as he can. He is a fan of the outdoors as he grew up camping, hunting, fishing, and playing in the woods. He is looking forward to some fun adventures in the mountains with his wife and their dog. During residency, he hopes to learn to be a doctor that can treat the whole person, both mentally and physically, while ensuring his patients feel respected and treated with dignity.

Meet our first year residents.

Andrew Wilson, D.O.

Dr. Andrew Wilson is from West Jordan, Utah. He received his undergrad in Utah, and attended medical school at A.T. Still University in Mesa, Arizona. He knew he wanted to become a doctor in high school. His love for working with and teaching people, helped to reinforce the idea that becoming a doctor would help to combine both of his interests. His professional interests are providing healthcare for historically underrepresented groups, working with transgender, queer, unhoused, and Latinx communities as well as in women's health.

Dr. Wilson chose the Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency Program for its dedication to providing healthcare to underserved communities and provides excellent outpatient AND inpatient training.

His hobbies include outdoor activities, hiking, and camping. He also loves to read and listen to audiobooks, especially in the genres of science fiction and high fantasy such as Star Wars, Lord of the Rings, Marvel, etc. During residency, he hopes to become proficient at managing and treating the various acute and chronic conditions that affect human health.

Meet our first year residents.

Sophie Zachary, D.O.

Dr. Sophie Zachary was born in Indiana but has been in Colorado since her early teenage years. She completed her undergrad at the University of Denver and attended medical school at Rocky Vista University in Colorado. Her interest in medicine started from a young age with a desire to make an impact on people's lives while building long-term relationships. Her professional interests include women's health, reproductive and transgender care, addiction medicine, and lifestyle medicine, with a focus on caring for patients with complex and often underserved needs.

Dr. Zachary chose the Fort Collins Family Medicine Residency for the offering of a strictly Family Medicine training environment, which allows for a wide clinical exposure and meaningful procedural experience. She experienced this firsthand during her Internship with the program as a medical student. The combination of strong training, collaborative learning, and a positive team dynamic felt like the right fit. Her hobbies include trail running, skiing, baking sourdough treats, reading a good coming of age book, and crafting the perfect Spotify playlist. During residency, Dr. Zachary hopes to learn how to integrate preventive care, behavioral health, and procedural skills to provide truly comprehensive family medicine.
